

appointment ^{completely} ~~completely~~

X Have you ever wondered why people are late? I 2 have. I've never know a person who's not 3 ~~bee~~ been late. Most of the time, lateness will 4 start from earliness. For example, lets say you 5 wake up on a Saturday morning at 7:00. You 6 have to get to a doctors appointment at 10:00, 7 which is only 3 blocks away. So you relax 8 and turn on the tv, only to find a repeated award show which is 4 hours long. By the time the award show is over you've completely forgotten about ~~5~~ your doctors appointment and get there at 1:00. See. ~~There is~~ or maybe you will wake up again on a Saturday at 1:00 and you need to get to a birthday party at 2:30. You are in a lot of trouble so you through the only skirt you can ~~find~~ find, which has way too many holes and you run out the door. You get to the party at 1:10 and no ones there luckily, there is dominos across the street. So you walk over to get some lunch, and by the time its 2:30 you've started eating your second slice. So lateness can come from lateness to earliness to lateness again. Car pools are morning lateness machines. Lets say ~~say~~ its tuesday morning and you wake up very early to have a confence at work with a client. Everyone in your party is early except for your arch enemy secretary Jan who thinks 2 hour showers are normal. So basically its almost impossible not to be late, unless of course you're early!
