

Did you ever notice that everyone grows out of stuff? Whether it's your favorite movie or whatever. For example I used to have a pillow. I loved that pillow I used to do everything with that pillow. Now I don't even know where it is. Now I'm into playstation. For example if I came home from school and my mom said she sold my playstation I would go CRAZY!!! But in like 20 years from now if my mom said that I would say ok I have my internet then my internet will last me the rest of my life. See how things can get you so quick even if you only like it for one day so when you go to a store think will this be something I really want or am I just saying that because I want everything.

Another entry by Jonathan on the same topic.